Title: Communication and public authorities on the religious education

Abstract: Existence of religious instruction in public schools in many European countries, including majority of the European Union members, and particularly its presence in legal systems where postulate of Church and State separation is strictly obeyed, seems like a safe guideline that the principle of state neutrality is by itself in no contradiction with religious education in the state-run schools. Juridical speaking we have to make the distinction between the obligations which the European states accepted on the field of international law on this filed and the internal legislation which was adopted by each country. Most of the European states adopted in their internal legislations, positive decisions for Religious education in accordance with the beliefs of the parents and their children.
